A World Within

"Oh, brave new world/ That has such people in 't!"
— Shakespeare: The Tempest

"This world, after all our science and sciences, is still a miracle; wonderful, inscrutable, magical and more, to whosoever will think of it."
— Carlyle: Heroes and Hero-Worship

"This may not be the best of all possible worlds, but to say that it is the worst is mere petulant nonsense."
— Huxley: The struggle for Existence in Human Society

There is for all of us that moment when we are never again children and are forever adults, a time when, as Paul wrote to the Corinthians, we must "put away childish things." We leave our safe and comfortable cocoons to emerge into a disturbing new environment: a little dangerous, a little confusing, always exciting. Life tempts us with a bewildering array of choices, so many that we may feel overwhelmed. What to do? Where to go? What if we make a mistake?

College, one choice among the thousands, offers still more possibilities, worlds within worlds to explore — career preparation, campus life, personal relationships. The questions, however, remain the same: Where do we go? What should we do? How will we live with the consequences of our decisions? Asking these questions-and finding their answers-put us on the path that all adults must take.

When we paid our registration fees, when we began taking classes, when we cheered for the Warriors at Homecoming, we became a part of East Central Community College, the first of many new worlds to investigate and enjoy. We asked our questions. We found our answers. We saw the roads before us. We began learning how to Live, and now there's no turning back, even if we wanted to.

We have discovered the pleasure in putting aside childish things.

Different Worlds Merge At ECCC

We came from many places in Mississippi — Louisville, Morton, Walnut Grove, Meridian.

We came from places outside the state — Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Alaska.

Some of us were truly far from home — Germany, Norway, Venezuela.

We all came together here in Decatur, MS, exchanging the world we knew back home for a new and initially unsettling one. How, we asked ourselves, could we ever feel comfortable here?

It happened, though, despite our misgivings, and the journey from strange to familiar created a story that grows in the telling.

Down on the farm with Stacy.

Believe it or not, they didn't always argue!

Can we say, "Cheese, please"?

Where's the catalog when you need it?

All working girls need a break.

You find friends in the strangest places.

Mrs. Moore did what, Felicia?

Look out Anitra! Lori is up to "no good."

Be vewy, vewy quiet. We're hunting Mrs. Smith.

It's a jungle out there!

Spring Spree-e-e-e!

This team, Stone Cold, stops to pose for the camera after they won.

Neil Hansford can not seem to find the rest of the car.

Mr. Price, do you throw all your students in the mud?

Grapefruit is not just for breakfast.

The No-Limit Soldiers take a break to show their bond as a team.

Leap frog is a popular event that started in kindergarten, but everyone still enjoys it.

What is the huffing and puffing all about, Katie?

What are Jenna Usry and Ronnie Thrash doing? Hopefully, practicing the grapefruit pass.

Spring Spree-e-e-e !

Brian Green is leading his team very well. They might actually win!

These two, as leaders, seem to have their act together.

Mr. Price seems to be enjoying himself more than anyone else. I'll bet he is 'light-headed' sitting in this position.

The most exciting part of Spring Spree is the mud baths. Stephanie Moody is one of the first ones to experience them.

Everyone is gathered around discussing the best game plan.

Awaiting her turn at the pea and spoon competition, Misti Harrell really looks enthusiastic!

Spring Spree takes a lot of energy and coordination, and these three just do not have the "spark" to stay on their feet.

WHAT? Good Poetry!

Carl was just a friendly neighbor, a citizen of Decatur all his life, strolling through the ECCC campus one balmy April night. As he passed the door of Mabry cafeteria, he paused to watch the people exiting. He recognized a friend and called to him: "Hey, Joe, what's going on in there?"

"You have missed a real good time, my friend," said Joe as they walked together toward South Campus. "Some mighty fine coffee and–" he hesitated and then in a rush added, "and some poems worth listening to!"

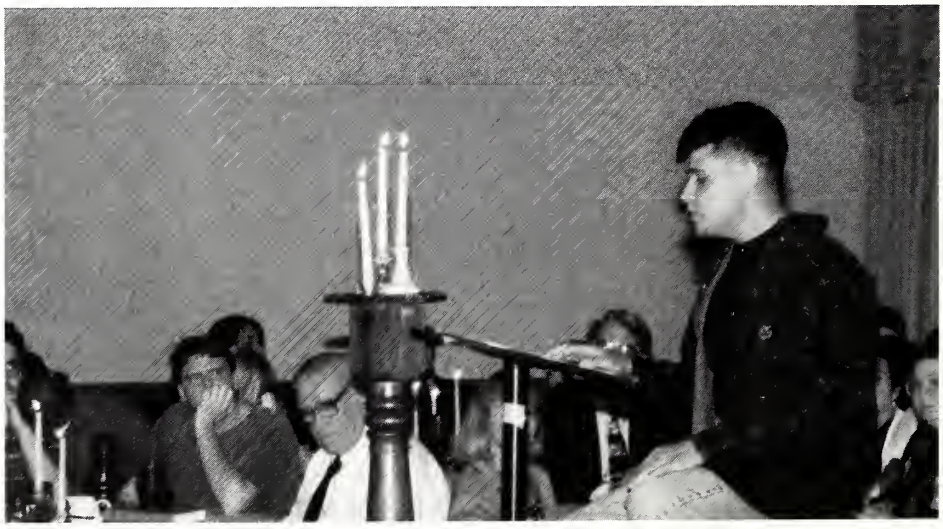
Joe's friend was astonished. Poetry, well, that's for the college folks, he thought. Makes sense for them, but the average person? What was Joe up to? Was he getting strange in his old age?

Carl's fears might have been laid to rest had he been with Joe at EC's Poetry Coffeehouse that night. Sponsored by instructor Laura Hammons and her world literature class, the event featured exotic coffee treats and a delicious assortment of readings by both professionals and amateurs.

Students shared their favorite classics as well as original compositions; Ovid Vickers delighted the audience with his own work as well as humorous pieces culled from old autograph books; and Hammons recited her first original poem. Interactive performances, music, and an unusual tribute to Emily Dickinson expanded the coffeehouse menu beyond mere "coffee-and-poem-to-go" into an enriching "café au lait" experience.

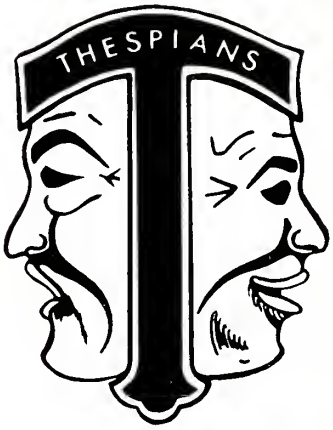
Essayist Thomas Macaulay once wrote that "perhaps no person can be a poet, or can even enjoy poetry, without a certain unsoundness of mind." Were the audience and participants at the coffeehouse crazy to be there? Is poetry beyond the understanding and enjoyment of the "man of the street"?

What do you think, Joe?



Travis Martin shows his creativity by reading one of his favorite works.

As always, Mr. Vickers puts the audience in awe as he presents a collection of his original poems.



Lila Hunt quotes poems of Carl Sandberg and to make the poems more realistic, Jason Gaines and Chas Evans furnish the special sound effects.

Saying Good-bye to ECCC

Dr. Shelby L. Harris began his career at East Central Community College in August 1963. He received his AA degree from ECCC, BS from Mississippi Southern College, M.ED. from Mississippi State University, and ED.D. from University of Southern Mississippi. During his career, he has received such honors as Distinguished Faculty Award, National Council of Teachers Commendation for Mathematics, and National Junior/Community College Honors Society. Dr. Harris has served as advisors for Alpha Alpha Epsilon, Engineering Club, and Phi Theta Kappa. He has also taught for Mississippi State University, University of Southern Mississippi, Newton, and Kemper County schools.

Mr. Billy R. Lovett joined the staff of ECCC January, 1993. Mr. Lovett is a graduate of ECCC, furthered his education at the University of Southern, Armed Forces Staff College, George Washington College (Washington, D.C.), and Mississippi State University. Before becoming a staff member at ECCC, he was an instructor at University of Southern Mississippi, Pensacola High School (Florida), and U.S. Navy. Not only does Mr. Lovett serve as an instructor at ECCC, he is the advisor for New Directions.

Mrs. Nancy H. Harris became the director of the Associate Degree Nursing program September, 1993. She began her post secondary education at Meridian Community College. After that, she continued at the University of Southern Mississippi School of Nursing, and University of Mississippi School of Nursing. Before her position at ECCC, she was employed at Riley Hospital, Laird Hospital, Choctaw Health Center, Madden Community Hospital, and Prime Care Nursing.

In August, 1993, Mrs. Mary Everett became the new electrical technology instructor at ECCC. She is a graduate of ECCC, where she earned a degree in electrical technology. Prior to ECCC, Mrs. Everett was employed at Peavey Electronics.

Dr. Richard Frank Fisher teaches chemistry at ECCC. He joined the staff in 1977. He received degrees from Cornell University and University of North Carolina. Dr. Fisher has held various positions at University of North Carolina, Cambridge University, University College London, and University of Melbourne. He is a member of American Chemical Society, Australian Biochemical Society, and Society of Sigma Xi.

Hello, New World

It was an experience that sometimes seemed familiar — and sometimes not. Purchasing notebooks and pens, looking for classrooms, doing that first assignment — that was comfortable territory. But waiting in registration lines with strangers? BUYING textbooks? Learning to check a syllabus for course information? You were tempted to run home to Mama and never look back.

You didn't, though. You stuck it out, even when your roommate complained about your music for the fiftieth time that week. You didn't give up, even when you got your third parking ticket. You hung in there, even though you were positive that band practice was going to lead to an untimely end — YOURS! What was your inspiration? What made you so sure that life at EC would improve?

Perhaps it was watching people "pig out" at the Welcome Back Picnic during the first week. You laughed; you made new friends; you indulged in the time-honored tradition of complaining about the food. You began to feel like part of the family instead of a visitor.

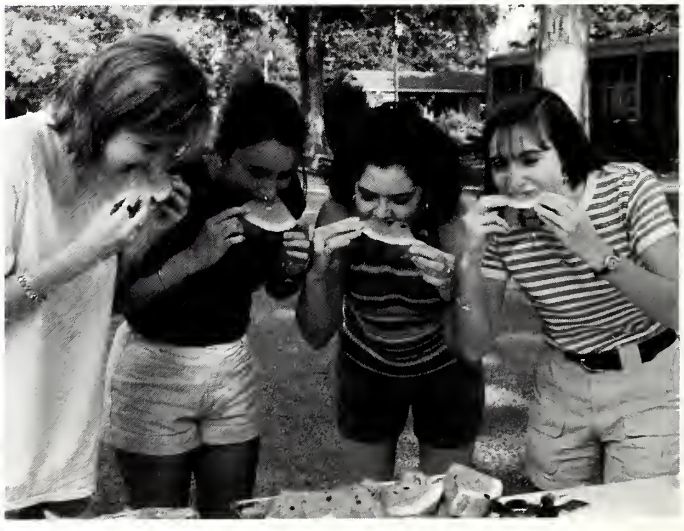
Maybe it was listening to the Back-to-School Jam Session; for once you and your roomie could agree on something musical. Or was it the Melon on the Mall encounter when you started to realize a lot of other people felt a little shy, a little hesitant, a little uneasy about the whole college experience?

Students enjoy "Meet the Warriors" night sponsored by Spanky's.

Nah, It was the hypnotist show, definitely. Laughing at — oops, WITH — others was the turning point. All your anxieties just floated away as you watched students shed their inhibitions and behave in the most outrageous ways. It was wonderful to simply relax and realize that you COULD deal with pressure, that you COULD live up to your parents' academic expectations, and that you COULD enjoy the company of people you had met just a week ago. You were going to be all right. This "brave new world" wasn't so bad after all.

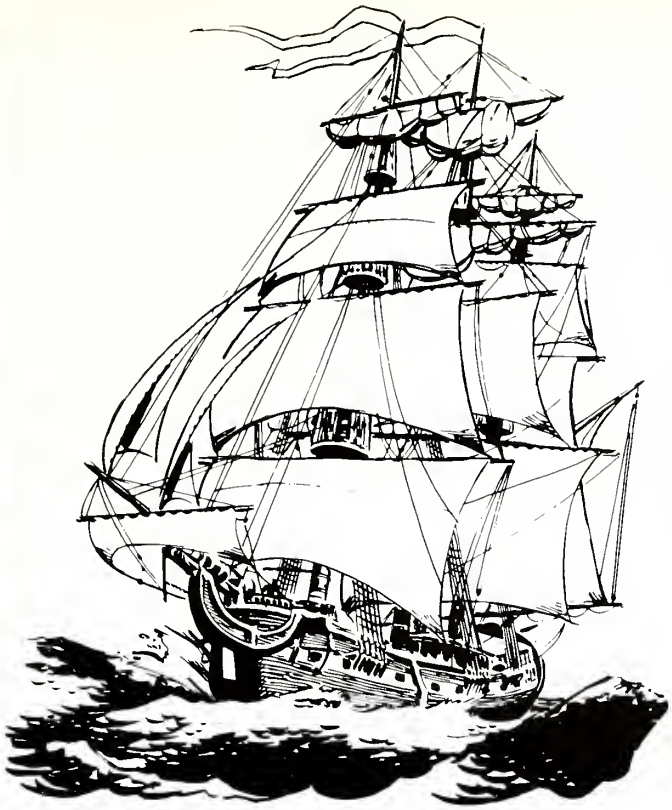
You had become a college student — an ECCC Warrior. High school seemed to be a hundred years in the past, and the future looked better every minute. You could face that biology lab now. That computer class didn't scare you as much. And you could talk to your roommate about learning to live together instead of sulking, whining, or yelling.

Life, you were amazed to discover, could be pretty good here at East Central.



Happiness is sinking your teeth into a mouth-watering melon.

Three heads are always better than one when making schedules.



Smile Please!

Students show their enthusiasm at a pep rally.

Wake up, Wally and Wendy!

"Hey, man, I can't sleep on this bed–my feet hang off!"
"You girls are just P-I-G pigs! Look at the mess– AAARGH! Roaches!"
"Knock off that noise! Some of us want to pass this semester!"

Poor Wally and Wendy Warrior. Here they are, freshmen in college, eager to chug-a-lug from the Big Gulp of life and very unhappy to discover that living with others requires some ADJUSTMENTS.

Being at home with Mom, Dad, and the Beaver had seemed so restrictive: the chores, the nagging, the "when I was your age" lectures. "Just wait till I graduate and go to college," Wally had mused. "Then let the good times roll! I can do things my way for a change," Wendy had dreamed. "Just wait and see!"

Ah, the innocence of youth. Little did they know what really lurked around the corner: chores, curfews, and–ohmigosh–ROOMMATES. Roommates who hog the bathroom. Roommates who get phone calls at 3 A.M. Roommates who think a broom's sole function is to prop open a window.

And the rooms .... Too cold. Too hot. Too small. Too much like a prison and not enough like HOME. Wally actually began to miss the Beaver, and Wendy's house back in Walnut Grove seemed like paradise.

Of course, nothing is completely hopeless. There was that time when Wendy and her suitemates worked through forty algebra problems and actually got all the right answers. There was that stormy night in Todd Hall when a bunch of the guys ate popcorn and discussed WOMEN. There was the realization, by the semester's end, that enduring life with strangers had turned into enjoying the company of friends.

Not all lessons are learned in classrooms, labs, and libraries. Repairing a broken toilet handle at midnight isn't in the elementary education curriculum, and learning how to make an eight o'clock class on time isn't listed in the college catalog. But these are a part of college, too.

Goodbye, childhood. Wally and Wendy are growing up.

Something for Everyone

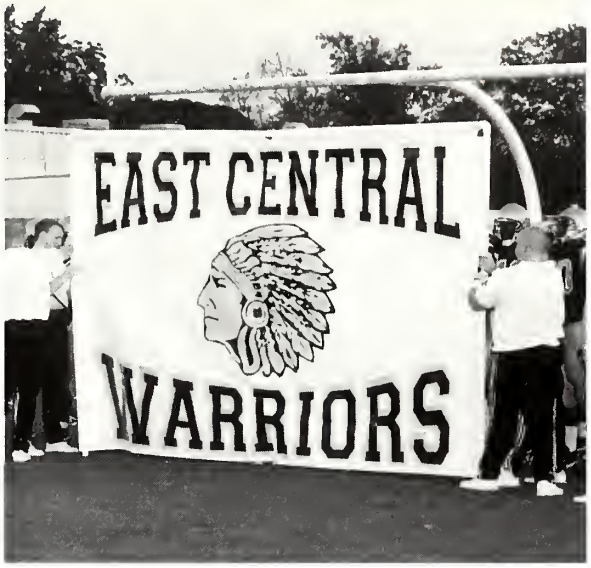
If music is your interest, we have it.

You can always "swing" with friends.

If you are interested, there are many clubs and organizations that are always helping the community, such as Phi Theta Kappa.

At social gatherings like the Coffee House, we can always sit and "soak in" a little culture.



For the more athletic, there is an array of sports, both varsity and intramural.

If you have an interest in the arts, there is the fine arts department in which you can really get a "hands-on" approach.

Oh! let's not forget. Some even enjoy the ACADEMIC activities.

Mr. and Miss East Central Community College

Uwe is Mr. ECCC of 1998-1999. His philosophy is to enjoy life. A person must set his goals high and do everything to reach them. He should never give up because actions are louder than words. His goals in life are to fulfill these goals and dreams. There are three things in life that Uwe values. Education is every important because it gives a person an opportunity to make something of his life. Family is also important because of the love and support. The final is success. Success develops and matures a person. Uwe was selected as MIP Tennis award. Student of the Month, Men's Double Champion at 1997-1998 Homecoming Tennis Tournament, National Dean's List, Dean's List Scholar. He is actively involved in East Central Environmental Club, Phi Theta Kappa, tennis, basketball and football.

Uwe Dotzauer

Ragan Mitchell

ECCC's Miss ECCC for 1998-1999 is Ragan Mitchell. To Ragan, the most important thing in life is her family. Her mother has always been there to encourage her to do her best. She also feels that her young brothers are a true blessing in her life. Ragan's philosophy is "the future is soon the past, so make the most of today." After graduating from ECCC Ragan plans to attend the University of Mississippi and major in pharmacy. She is a part of various clubs, organizations, and activities. She is a participate in softball, Warrior Corps, Student Body Association, Phi Theta Kappa, Mu Alpha Theta, SADD, and was freshman class officer. Ragan has been honored with such awards as All Region 23 Award (softball), Who's Who in American Junior Colleges, All-American Scholar, President's List, and homecoming sophomore maid.

EC's Scholars Bowl

Wednesday afternoon. You've just left psychology class, you're more than halfway through the school week, and your mind is already busy with weekend plans. Despite your preoccupation, however, the activity in Room 106 of Newton Hall catches your interest: buzzers sounding, voices competing for attention —

Name the structures that enable paramecium to move.
Who wrote The Vindication of the Rights of Women in 1792?
What infamous Russian influenced the court of Czar Nicholas II?

An episode of Jeopardy? A fierce round of Trivia Pursuit?

Well, close. It's a practice session for East Central's Scholars Bowl team, and Cliff, Lindsay, Craig, Kristen, and Celeste are hard at work training for the South Mississippi Scholars Bowl Competition. With the guidance of advisor Linda Pierce, these Academic Warriors are preparing for questions in humanities, natural and physical sciences, math, fine and performing arts, and social sciences.

Such preparation can be a difficult, even grueling task. The 1998-99 team isn't daunted, however; they've already "walked through the fire." Tryouts for the group involve a written test as well as simulated competition. Cliff Edwards, a computer science major, recalls that the test was "challenging" and advises prospective members: "If you know a little of everything, you have a better chance than someone who knows a lot of one thing." Teammate Craig McRae, whose specialties include math, music, chemistry, art, and economics, adds, "Get all you can out of your classes, and keep up with current events." It "takes hard work and dedication," continues Celeste Staton of Union, who remembers that she "enjoyed (her) high school quiz team."

Teamwork Discipline, Preparation. These words evoke images of athletic prowess and physical close encounters. Unfortunately, we sometimes forget that there are also contests of the mind, and that Warriors aren't restricted to ball fields and courts.

Awards Day 1998

Honoring A Legend

Imagine the stereotypical history instructor: boringly pedantic, hopelessly out of touch, a furtive little soul who scurries in and out of his office. His realm is the Florence of Lorenzo de Medici or the Philadelphia of Benjamin Franklin. He is the slave of history, a spectator, never a participant.

For nearly four decades, Dr. Richard Ethridge's professional life belied such a stereotype, and on May 9, 1998, East Central Community College recognized his outstanding work and leadership in a moving convocation and dedication ceremony in which a building at the school's South Campus was named the Richard C. Ethridge Hall in his honor.

As a social sciences instructor, the Davision Chair of Social Science, Businesss Administration, and Education, and a member of various faculty committees, Dr. Ethridge for 37 years taught students that the road to the future begins in the past. "Seeing somebody that I encouraged to move in the right direction—seeing him achieve and become successful"—this, believes Dr. Ethridge, is a high point in his teaching career.

An active member of such organizations as Pi Gamma Mu, Phi Kappa Phi, the Mississippi Historical Society and a published historian, he has helped generations of students recognize history's vitality and relevancy. Nor have his contributions been solely to academia; as an ordained minister, he has pastored several area Baptist churches and used his expertise as a president of the Mississippi Baptist Historical Commission.

Dedicated teaching. Thoughtful scholarship. Community service. Christian leadership. This was Richard Ethridge's world during his 37 years at East Central Community College. The building on South Campus is a reminder that his legacy lies with his students, with their achievements and their influence on others. They will be an everlasting memorial to an outstanding career and a fine man who admonishes that "Life's a struggle and I say when you get to the end of your rope tie a knot, hang on, and keep kicking!"

Dr. Richard Ethridge

Miss Wood makes sure that everyone is ready and she proudly takes the lead to begin this momentous event for Dr. Ethridge.

Dr. Smith relinquishes the podium to Dr. Ethridge, the honored guest.

Dr. Ethridge entertains and inspires the audience with his words of wisdom.

Emerging Into A New World: Graduation

A World of Giving

So much to do: A&P lab reports, sociology research papers, calculus problems.

So many demands: run extra laps during ball practice, practice the Centralette routine for another hour, read that play for literature class.

So much to learn: how to save a life with CPR, how to use the Magnolia Project, how to safely wire a building.

This is college — years of cramming 48 hours of activities into each 24-hour day. With so much going on, it's easy to forget what's happening "outside," beyond East Central's expanding campus. Easy for most of us, that is. For some dedicated EC students, faculty members, and staff, however, involvement "outside" is anything but forgettable.

Kids' College, for example, offers summertime learning opportunities in areas such as art, social usage, computers, and mathematics to local elementary and junior-high students. Young athletes sharpen their competitive skills at softball, baseball, and basketball camps held at East Central each year. In 1998, HOSA members sponsored a food drive for the Gulf Coast victims of Hurricane Georges, Dr. Thomas Key collected household items for burnout victims and the handicapped, and for several years Phi Theta Kappa has adopted a portion of Hwy. 15, keeping it litter-free and attractive. One of the newest service groups consists of the 53 EC students who tutor Newton County Elementary School children as part of the Mississippi Reads project, a branch of the America Reads national literacy program.

So much to do. So much to learn. And an important life-lesson, one that many EC students have mastered, is that it is better to give than to receive.

Life's an Adventure!

"It has made me feel young again ..."

A night on the town will do that. Falling in love will do that. Zipping around the county in a Mustang convertible will do that.

But School?

You bet. according to Jo Ann Smith, an accounting technology major who at age 59 is having the time of her life right here at East Central. "Re-entering school has given me the satisfaction of knowing I can do anything I want to do," she says. She enjoys "getting up each day with a new purpose in life."

Smith is just one of a growing number of nontraditional students flocking to Mississippi colleges. They come for a variety of reasons: improvement of job skills, career moves, professional advancement, and personal satisfaction. As Rebecca Owen of Union notes, "I am tired of working at jobs that provide little or no intellectual stimulation." A psychology major, Owen adds that she likes "the feeling that I am moving forward rather than stagnating."

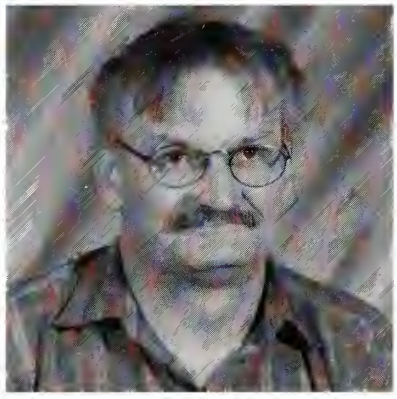
Upward and onward — it's a sentiment echoed by many of EC nontraditional students, who seem pleasantly surprised by th warm welcome they've received. "I only wish that I had the ca ing, patient teachers in my childhood and high school years th I have had here at EC," remarks Bobby Kirby, a Forest reside seeking personal enrichment. "The efforts of the younger st dents to assist me have also been a special blessing." Marc Ellis, Jr., agrees: "I've attended college at Ole Miss, the Univers ty of Michigan, and Heidelberg University, Germany," he say and "never have I found a more caring, more concerned, ar helpful faculty." As she prepares for a career in drafting, Shar Boyette delights in "being able to socialize with younger studen and learn from them as well as set an example."

After all, Jackie Hurn reminds us, "Life is not a game. What yc do here at EC will in part determine what type of future you w or will not have. It's up to you." And the future doesn't ju belong to the young, as Eunice Robinson is discovering: "I four out you can learn something at 60."

Or 80. Or 30. Just ask Tracy Goodin, age 33, an engineerir technology major. Or Mary Tingle, age 47, a CDVT major.

It's not just school. It's an adventure.

Mary Tingle - Child Technology



Billy Bates - Liberal Arts

Pam Chunn - Drafting

Hall of Fame

Uwe Dotzauer

"Very talented, energetic, and performs well in a country foreign to him" well describes Uwe. Uwe is a great asset to ECCC. He has been very active in every aspect of ECCC life. Uwe has a great desire to learn in the academic field, as well as, in the cultural realm. While at ECCC, Uwe has been a member of the tennis team, East Central Environmental Club, and served as basketball manager. He has received such awards as Most Improved Player, nominated for the All-American Academic Team, Dean's List Scholar, and a member of Phi Theta Kappa. As one instructor stated, "Germany's loss is certainly our gain."

Brandi Duncan

Brandi is very talented in both music and theater. More than one of her instructors used these words to describe Brandi. In addition to all this talent, she is an "exemplary student at East Central. One instructor sums up Brandi Duncan: "When one reads the qualifications for ECCC's Hall of Fame, Brandi Duncan fits all of them." Brandi is a member of the concert choir, Collegians, ECCC Players, Mu Alpha Theta, Student Education Association, Wall-O-Sound Marching Band, and Jazz Band. She has received awards, such as, Dean's List Scholar, Best Supporting Actress, Citizen's Bank Scholarship, and Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges.

Brock Lillis

While attending ECCC, Brock has been an outstanding athlete and student. He is the epitome of a true student-athlete. "He signifies what a student should be with a great work ethic, character, self-discipline, leadership, and a high moral standard." Brock loves football, but he has his priorities: education comes first. Brock leaves ECCC with a list honors. He is Dean's List Scholar, football team captain 1st team All-state, 1st team All-region, All-Star, 2nd team All-American, M.V.P. Offensive Lineman, Academic Award. With all these activities, Brock still maintains a 3.66 GPA.

Ragan Mitchell

Everyone agrees that "Ragan Mitchell embodies all you see in an East Central Student. She is courteous, intelligent, very involved, dependable and determined." Evern though her time is limited, Ragan still maintains a high GPA. She is the type of person who always gives her best in whatever she endeavors. Ragan is very active in softball, SADD, Sigma Sigma Mu Tau, Mu Alpha Theta, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and Study Body Association. She is the recipient of All-Region 23 Softball Pitcher award, Student Government award, Academic All-American Scholar, President's List Scholar, Dean's List Scholar sophomore homecoming maid, and Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges. As one instructor aptly put it, "I wish we had ten more just like her."

Jennifer Pace

Jennifer exemplifies "the spirit of ECCC. She continuously seeks ways to represent ECCC." This quote was used several times to describe Jennifer. Jennifer is always ready to assist with various activities at ECCC. She has taught Beginning Cheerleader class for Kid's College, assisted in basketball camps and tournaments, and serves as a volunteer for State Games of Mississippi. Throughout her busy schedule, Jennifer has maintained a 3.7 GPA. Her busy schedule includes being a member of Mu Alpha Theta, Sigma Sigma Mu Tau, Diamond Girls, Cheerleader, and dormitory council. She has received awards as head cheerleader, was freshman class officer, freshman homecoming maid, selected as Who's Who Among Students in American Junior College, All-American Scholar, Dean's List Scholar, and Student Government Award.

Venessa Sanders

Two words describe Vanessa: dedication and individuality. Even though she may begin as a novice, when everything is said and done, she matures into an experienced worker. Her dedication to any project, whether it is the yearbook or the environmental club, makes Vanessa a valuable asset. It is her individuality that attracts attention. One instructor emphasizes that "Vanessa is a leader. She takes the initiative to do tasks without being told." Vanessa is a member of Mu Alpha Theta, Sigma Sigma Mu Tau, Student Education Association, Peer Tutorial Club, East Central Environmental Club, and editor of Wo-He-Lo staff for 2 years. Honors bestowed upon Vanessa include the following: President's Council, Co-editor Wo-He-Lo, Vice-president Scholar- Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges, Co-Winner Wo-He-Lo Award.

The Force Behind ECC

Dr. Eddie Smith

Wo-He-Lo: The theme for the 1998-99 yearbook is "A World Within." What are some special qualities of EC that make y feel it is a world within?

Dr. Smith: East Central represents a microcosm of our total state, nation, and to some extent, the world. The College ser individuals from all demographic areas. Those we serve have a tremendous variety of needs and expectations. T diversity adds immensely to the quality of the total educational experiences of all of our students.

WHL: What were your goals when you were a student at EC?

Dr. S.: Primarily, I wanted to prepare myself for a professional career in education. As a student it was my desire to beco a high school teacher in the areas of biology and chemistry. Also, as a student, I had the desire to make the very b possible grades in all of my courses.

WHL: Who was your mentor at EC?

Dr. S.: Dr. Bradley Tucker I would consider my mentor. He was the Dean of Instruction at the time. He took a lot of interes me. He was still the Dean of Instruction when I came back as president. That was unique.

WHL: What is your personal philosophy that guides you as a husband, parent, and citizen?

Dr. S.: Christian principles provide the basis of my personal philosophy. I've always tried to treat everyone with respect a have tried to be sensitive to his feelings and needs. Basically, I try to follow the Golden Rule.

WHL: What is your professional philosophy?

Dr. S.: It has been my philosophy to strive for excellence in anything that I pursue. At East Central I've always followed philosophy that if we provide an activity or program, we should strive to make that activity or program the best p sible program or activity of its kind. Too, in all of my professional roles, I have always tried to maintain the persp tive that I was working for the people or organization, rather than them working for me.

BASEBALL EC STYLE!

It is a sensuous world: the painful throb in a first baseman's hand after a solid catch, the vivid, spring-green grass that dazzles the eye of the infielders, the lyrical shoptalk inside the dugouts.

It is a sensuous world: the excited conversations on the bus home after a successful game, the soreness in a pitcher's arm after a long, hot afternoon doubleheader, the smell of wet dirt as the thunderstorm passes and the teams take the field.

It is the world of baseball, and no one understands it better than veteran EC coach Jamie Clark and his 1998 Diamond Warriors.

With an outstanding 31-20 seasons, Clark had every reason to be proud of the team.

Then they claimed the state championship title with the 15-8 defeat of Gulf Coast. It was a sweet and moving moment for Clark, who noted that "we had many heroes in the tournament and during the regular season–from our regulars who did so well and those who came off the bench and excelled in clutch situations." He also paid tribu to the Warriors' fans: "O crowd support was outstandi ... It was a definite factor helping us win.

It is a sensuous world–the s isfying weight of a championsh ring, the cheers of enthusias supporters, the ache in musc that tells a player he's giv 100%. It's the emotion in father's grin when he applau his son from the bleachers. the feel of a jersey on the back a winner. It's taking defeat on t chin and never giving up. I baseball.

Meeting the Challenge
AN EC TRADITION

Discipline. Intelligence. Effort.

Enthusiasm. These were the attributes of 1998 Warrior football, personified bey a young team described by the coaching staff as having "big play capabilities on both sides of the ball." New head coach Terry Underwood set the tone early in the season: "We plan to be a disciplined team ... a smart football team ... a hard-nosed, physical team ... that is really going to hit folks and run to the ball on defense, and block and execute on offense."

Expecting the best from his players is a holdover from Underwood's fourteen years as assistant to Coach Willie Coats, whom Underwood succeeded when Coats announced his retirement last year:

"I think the world of Coach Coats. I have a lot of respect for him ... He is a fair man, a good Christian man and a very good football coach. He is also a highly, highly competitive person. I just hope I can take those attributes and use them myself with our players."

Living up to their coach's expectations was a grueling challenge for returning sophomores like Jermaine Boyd, transfers like Alex Sanchoyerto, and freshmen such as Steve Henley and Josh Hardy. Meeting challenges, however, is an EC tradition, and the '98 team faced every obstacle with style and determination.

Education Outside the Classroom

You've heard it all before: Education is the key to success. Education creates the whole person. Get that degree if you don't want to flip burgers all your life.

You don't totally disagree — there's some merit in these statements, although the refrain does get a little tiresome. But what about the extracurricular stuff "they" push you to join? Any merit there — or are you wasting your time? Wouldn't it make more sense just to take more classes?

Well, if preparing for "the real world" is truly your goal, then the answer is a resounding, NO, as students like Nathan Cumberland will quickly tell you. A sports medicine major from Newton, Cumberland practiced life skills as a member of EC's rodeo team — skills such as managing time, setting goals, and getting along with others. He learned "to never give up; even when you mess up ... try again."

Ashley Byram of LaCenter, Kentucky, learned how to cope with stress, follow directions, and respect other viewpoints as an enthusiastic participant in the Collegians and Phi Theta Kappa. A tutor in the MS Reads program, she learned patience and "to be kind to children who need more help than others to learn."

Respects for others seems to be a popular extracurricular lesson at EC. The Collegians taught it to Tori Jordan. Intramural sports helped Ike Melton. Valarie Barfield developed it as a member of SIFE, and Ken Barden notes that in the Warrior Corps, he "learned the value of other people. Getting personal and helping people out lets you know what it's like to be on the other side trying to get in."

Take a few minutes to talk with students, and you discover education in the most surprising places. Singing with the gospel choir made Tiffany Smith more patient. "Football," explains Michael Morris, involves "commitment, honesty, unity, and perseverance." Adam Lowrey agrees: "Football teaches all of the essential needs to be a productive parent, spouse, and employee. It teaches determination, drive, leadership, dedication, to use and direct your passions, and most of all, loyalty and togetherness."

College, then, really does prepare students for the future — and education is not just "book learning."

"I... I have my head in the game of life," insisted Laneezer Carter as she headed for softball practice. "The life skills I have learned ... will help make me a better person ... "

It's a conviction that many EC students share.

Italy and Greece in Ten Days

Twenty-seven students, teachers, and friends of Dr. Shelby Harris accompanied him on a ten-day tour of Italy and Greece in early June 1998. EC students Sonya Thomas, Beth Garvin, and Candice McCormick and Hinds student Kayti Abel along with EC faculty members Leonard Barrier, Mary Hanson, Melinda Smith, Sandy Wedgeworth, and retired English instructor Carol Vickers enjoyed the trip.

The group touched down in Bella Roma! After driving past the Piaszza Venezia and the grassy ruins of the Forum Romanum, the Colosseum - ultimate symbol of Rome - they entered the Vatican City. They were astonished by the Bibical painting on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel of Michelangelo and also his Pieta in St. Peter's Basilica. The group walked in the footsteps of Nero and Ceasar during the guided tour of Rome, which included a journey into the underground catacombs and along the Appian Way to the Church of St. Peter in Chains.

Many group members opted for an excursion to Florence and marveled at Michelangelo's David inside the Academia — sculpted when the brilliant Renaissance artist was just 26 years old.

The group crossed by the Bay of Naples to the Isle of Capr a favorite spot of Roman emperors in the first millennium and later viewed the amazing ruins of the ancient resort Pompeii, perfectly preserved when Mt. Vesuvius erupted 79 A.D.

After boarding an overnight ferry in Brindisi, Italy, the grou disembarked in Patras, Greece, and journeyed through th beautiful countryside to Delphi, site of the ancient oracle, visit the Temple of Apollo.

Continuing to Athens, group members climbed the heigh of the Acropolis to the majestic Parthenon. There they sa the Temple of Athena Nike, after whom the city was name Later, they strolled through the Plaka district, sampling tr ditional Greek dishes and listening to the bouzouki.

Group enjoys a rest in Rome.

Experiencing the World

This new and different world at ECCC, especially for freshmen, has been the scene for many different experiences, challenges, and changes. All students — yes, even the "old" sophomores — have undergone some sort of change: gaining new friendships, losing some, losing "old" loves, finding "new" loves, and discovering new worlds.

With every changing season, decisions are made — good and bad; lessons are learned — good and bad.

With each rotation of this world at ECCC, its students evolve into better citizens, equipped with more knowledge and skills to discover different worlds for themselves. As spring comes to an end, so does the busy, hectic life at ECCC. But, with fall, also comes a new group of wide-eyed fledglings ready to spread their wings and emerge into ECCC's world, where these creatures are embraced and accepted as part of the macrocosm at ECCC.

EC Expands Its World: Environmental Club

Action from principle, — the perception and the performance of right, — changes things and relations.
Henry David Thoreau: Resistance to Civil Government

Thoreau, one of the premier naturalists in American history, knew that following any ideal has little to do with mere lip service. To meet a campus-wide need for an active environmental group, the East Central Environmental Club (ECEC) was formed in 1998 under the faculty sponsorship of Laura Hammons.

As stated in the group's constitution, the organization's purpose is to promote environmental awareness among its members and the community, to encourage recycling, and to become an active part of the environmental community. To achieve these goals, we have set up recycling bins for aluminum cans over the East Central campus and also have a central bin in Newton Hall for newspaper recycling.

Determined to take our "principles" and turn them into "action," ECEC has ambitious plans to use all monies from recycling an fundraisers to visit key natural site in Mississippi to get an in-dept look at the natural diversity in ou postage-stamp part of the plane The students who serve as office are Vanessa Sanders, Presiden Josh Eure, Vice President; Anund ata McElhenney, Secretary-Trea surer. The full Executive Commi tee consists of the officers and th members of these three standir committees: Recycling Commi tee-Chair Valerie Sam and Vic Chair Johnny Gun; Activitie Committee- Chair Melanie Atki son and Vice Chair Sharonc Triplett; and Fundraising Commi tee — Chair Angela Hays and Vic Chair Jennifer McWilliams.

Dr. Key, Amy, Crystal and Tori eat a much-deserved meal before the nature walk.

Josh Eure and Johnny Gun show that if Dr. Smith is recycling, it must be "cool."

Anunciata McElhenny is not only ECEC's Secretary-Treasurer, she is our first official member as well.

That is REALLY staring the problem in the face!

Hold still, Little Dogie!

The solution is to just take the bull by the horns.

Beauticians, take note. A new way to style your hair.

Hey! anything beats sitting in an English class!

Our Ever Changing World

As my time at East Central comes to an end, I have mixed feelings. Going on to another way of life will be exciting, but, on the other hand, I will be leaving something behind. We all will. All of us who are finished at East Central will have to venture out beyond our "home away from home." What will we do? Get Married. Get a Ph.D. Travel around the world. Everything. Something. East Central has helped finish our foundations and we are free to go off and build our castles — whether our castle is the Eiffel Tower ... or a quaint country cottage.

To those who will be returning next year, enjoy the time you have left at ECCC. You see, we as students are so lucky. We have a place of our own here. We have top-notch teachers who care, we have clubs, sports and music in which to participate, and we have people at the "top of the totem pole" looking out for us to make sure we have a successful college experience. All of these things are rare.

As you go on with your life, in whatever direction it may lead you, don't forget from where you came. East Central Community College will always be in your "World Within."
